Please register your details using the link above to attend and use the password GNIplus2020 to access the page. If you are unable to attend please pass this invitation on to any colleagues you think will be interested to attend this event.

Topics covered will include: carbon rights and their importance in the context of climate finance and the background to legal recognition of carbon rights; examples of treatment of carbon rights in other jurisdictions; and analysis of carbon rights in Kenya.

The presenters at the event will be lawyers from Pollination, a climate change advisory and investment firm with expertise in climate change law and lawyers from the Nairobi law firm, Kieti Advocates.

Pollination is a member of a consortium called the 'Global NDC Implementation Partners' or 'GNIplus', along with Climate Policy Initiative (a climate finance organisation) and AECOM (an engineering firm). The team at Pollination have deep expertise in the field of climate change law, with a strong focus on the implementation of the Paris Agreement through Nationally Determined Contributions and on climate finance.

Kieti Advocates is a boutique law firm with an established track record in advising on climate change law in Kenya and the wider African region.

Please note that because this is a virtual legal training no CPD credits can be earned through participation in the training.
